A suit by a Mr. Samuel Brannan for a large amount of money, involving serious charges, of evil doing, has been commenced in San Francisco against the Central Pacific Railroad Company and other corporations. An answer by the President of the Central Pacific Rai!road Company to the suit and heavy charges brought against it by Samuel Brannan, dcclares them false and malicious, brought only to extort money.

Notwithstanding the recent alarming reports from official sources, mentioning indications of HOSIERY. immediate general Indian hostilities, the bureau is in clined to think, from communications received from its agents, that the season has advanced to a period which will not favor any such movement among the Indians, and consequently regard the majority of the reports recently published as by no means entitled to

A letter to a New York paper from South Pass, Wyoming, June 26th, says that some of the followers of Red Cloud and Medicine Man had made a raid upon that town and plundered the inhabitants of $15,000 worth of property, principally cattle. The writer makes some sarcastic allusions to the entertainment of Red Cloud in Washington, and the expenditure of $50,000 upon him and his party.

The constitutional election in Illinois on Saturday, as far as heard from, resulted in the adoption of the new constitution and of the articles subjected to a separate vote. Among these last is the one introducing the principle of minority representation.

The Quakers in Norway are often called up on to suffer for their principles. Two English Friends, who have just returned from that country, say they found young men in prison at Christiansand, for refusing to bear arms.

Another delegation of Sioux Indians has arrived in Washington, eight days from the Cheyenne Agency. They are to have an icterview, make specches, and, it is said, intend

THE STEAMBOAT RACE ON THE MISSISSIPPI. -The newspapers of Louisville, Cincinnati, St. Louis and others of the river cities, are tilled with the details of the foolbardy race from New Orleans to St. Louis between the steamboats Robert E. Lee and Natchez. The distance is in round numbers one thousand miles, and the Lee has run it in three days, eighteen hours and fourteen minutes, an average, not including stoppages, of a mile in five and three fifths minutes during the trip. The Natchez arrived at St. Louis nearly seven hours behind the Lee, but her Captain claims the victory because he lost six hours in a fog on the river and thirty-six minutes in repairing a pump, making his actual running time some lew minutes less than that of the Lee. The Natchez is a Cincinnati boat, 300 feet long, and with paddle wheele 44 feet in diameter. The Lee is 293 feet long, and has paddle wheels 38 feet in diameter. The race grew out of a desire to excel the Natchez's time made some three weeks ago between New Orleans and St. Louis, and this the Lee has succeeded in doing, her time being three hours and forty-four minutes less, and the fastest ever made over the course. This dangerous and really useless affair was promoted and backed up by the river men and gamblers, and the interest arous- burg Fair, in 1869. ed seems to have been so universal along the Mississippi that the Fourth of July ank into comparative insignificance. The betling everywhere was enormous, and one of the Memphis papers even tells that as no men who were not interested could be found to act as takeholders the money was deposited in the hands of women. The boats carried no freight or passengers, and the wheel houses were strip bed and cabins kept closed in order to remove every possible impediment to the cleaveage of the air. Every stick of wood before being placed in the lurnaces was dipped into tar, pitch and turpentine, and in addition to this on the Natchez a hose was attached to a tank of lard oil, and the wood soaked also with it so as to aid combustion. Barges with wood and coal ere stationed in mid stream, and the great teamers took from them their supplies of fuel ith the shortest possible stoppage.

The people flocked to the river banks from iles back in the country to witness the passage the steamers. At Memphis business actualcame to a stand still and the bluffs in front the city were crowded with spectators. At onisville, Cincinnati and St. Louis betting on he result was the main business transacted on

Change and in the business houses. The rash and dangerous trial is over, fortu ately, without any accident, but as to those ersons who risk their lives in such a way it Last to tread." Nobody is any better off by the result except the gamblers who staked their honey upon the Lee.—Baltimore American.
